CLASS IV: IRREGULAR VERBS

There are but few irregular verbs, and they are for the most part the same in NG as in SG, and in most cases have the same irregularities as the corresponding verbs in Persian.

For more facile reference they are tabulated on p. 91, the 1st person singular only being quoted.

CLASS V: THE CAUSAL VERB

A large number of verbs which are by nature intransitive may be made transitive by the insertion of the syllable  $-\bar{a}n$ - between the root and the infinitive termination, and which changes in most parts of the verb to -īn- or -iain-. Examples—

wụshĩn wụshāndin	to be disseminated to scatter
shkīān	to break
shkānin	to cause to break
aishin aishāndin	to ache to hurt
pīchīn	to twist
pīchāndin	to cause to twist
tersīn	to fear
tersānin	to affright

The present indicative of these verbs is (causal form) dawushainim, dashkīainim (SG), dashkīnim (NG), daishīnim, dapīchīnim, datersīnim, while the preterite (which is but the verb with the infinitive termination dropped) will be wushāndim, shkānim, aishāndim, pichāndim, tersānim.

This rule is applicable to any intransitive verb where a separate verb does not exist to express the transitive meaning, as in the case of hātin, to come, which has īnān, to bring, i.e. to cause to come.

Following the rule above-mentioned, the verb is quite regular, the main parts being as follows:—

Infinitive Preterite	shkāndin shkāndim, ma shkānd	Pres. Indicative Perfect	dashkainim shkāndima
Imperfect	ma dashkānd	Pluperfect	shkāndī būm
Conditional	shkainim	Subjunctive	bishkainim
Future	shkainim	Imperative	bishkaina

From this form a verbal noun is formed of the past participle as shkāndī, a broken thing, wushāndī, that which is spread about, rishandi, a thing poured about, and so on, and so from these a passive verb may be formed with the verb  $b\bar{u}n$ , to become, as we may say shkāndi dabī it will become broken wushāndi dabī it will be spread about which avoids the ambiguity which we have in English, for instance, when we say 'it is broken', when it is not evident whether the object has broken of itself, or whether a known cause has caused it to break. The Kurmānjī must say either shīkāwa or shikia, 'it has broken,' or shkāndī hayya, 'it has been broken.'

An example of the use is seen in the phrases—duļī shkāwam shkāndīta, khwai la khwai shkā, atü dashkīainī, cha mā?

my broken heart thou hast broken, it broke of itself (if) thou art breaking it, what shall be left?

az tañg o bālātañgī dashidīnim

I will tighten the girths and the overgirths deshidīnīm, from shedāndin, to cause to become tight, of which the intransitive verb is shedīān, to become tight.

rumā khwa hezhāndīa, he shook his lance, from hezhāndin, to cause to tremble, of which the intransitive verb is hezhīan.

THE VERB IN -awa

This is only met with in the Southern Group of dialects, and only in such verbs as those which in the Northern Group prefix wa with the meaning of 'open', as wa hirrin, to open, which appears in SG as kirdināwā.

Such verbs are rare, the only others much used being shārdināwā, an alternative to hal bzhārdin, meaning 'to select'; hātinawa, 'to return'; g'hāstinawa, 'to shift,' etc.

The construction of the parts of the verb presents no difficulty, and they are as follows:—

Infinitive kirdināwā Preterite kirdmāwā Pres. Indicative dakamāwā Perfect wā kirdma, wām kirduwa
makirduāwā
Imperfect makirdāwā Conditional kawāwā

Imperfect makirdāwā Conditional kamāwā Pluperfect kirduwā būm Future dahamāwā wā wām kirdū bū

Subjunctive bikamāwā Imperative bikarāwā

In the perfect and pluperfect, as the natural form of the verb ends in awa and the addition of  $\bar{a}w\bar{a}$  makes a cumbrous word, the prefixial forms are generally used.

It will be noticed that in the imperative the verb takes its true form bikar, which it does not do when used simply and without any affix.

Infinitive

The infinitive is not the fundamental part of the verb. This is found in the imperative, and to the imperative (less the prefix bi) is added whatever syllable provides the infinitive, which strictly speaking is a verbal noun. For example—

bi-rrū , roo	t is rrū ,	infinitive	rrūin,	to go bi-zhār	$zhar{a}r$		zhārdin	to choose bi-kha	kha		khestin	to throw bi-shū	$shar{u}$		shūstn	to wash
bi-kaw	kav		kawtin	to fall
bi-kulān	kulān		kulānin	to cook
bi-garī	garī		garīān	to wander

From the above it will be remarked that the terminations which form an infinitive from a root are -in, -din, -stin, -in, and  $-\bar{a}n$ .

With the root thus supplied the present indicative, future, conditional, and subjunctive are formed: root,  $rr\bar{u}$ ; present indicative,  $darr\bar{u}im$ ; future,  $darr\bar{u}imawa$ ; conditional,  $rr\bar{u}im$ ; subjunctive,  $birr\bar{u}im$ .

From the infinitive less the final n and its supporting vowel the other parts of the verb are formed: root,  $zh\bar{a}r$ ; infinitive,  $zh\bar{a}rdin$ ; infinitive less n with supporting vowel -i-,  $zh\bar{a}rd$ ; preterite,  $zh\bar{a}rdim$ , ma  $zh\bar{a}rd$ ; imperfect, dam  $zh\bar{a}rd$ , ma  $dazh\bar{a}rd$ ; perfect,  $zh\bar{a}rdima$ ,  $mazh\bar{a}rdawa$ ; pluperfect,  $zh\bar{a}rd\bar{u}ma$ ,  $zh\bar{a}rd\bar{u}ma$ ; subjunctive past,  $bizh\bar{a}rdim$ , bim  $zh\bar{a}rdawa$ ; past participle,  $zh\bar{a}rd\bar{u}a$ , zhardawa.

From the above it will be noticed that, given the imperative and the infinitive, all present tenses are constructed from the former, and all past tenses from the latter, and with these peculiarities in mind any verb (except the irregular verbs specially mentioned) may be conjugated.

The infinitive alone is not always sufficient to form the verb, as in some cases what appears to be an infinitive termination is part of the verb, as in the case of bestin, where the infinitive termination appears to be stin. This, however, is not the case, and by the imperative, which is bibesta, it is seen that in is the indication of the infinitive only.

(In the dialects of the Kermanshah district this verb follows the Persian form, and makes its imperative in biwana—Persian biband—thus making the infinitive termination stin, and the verb an irregular one.)

THE DEFECTIVE VERBS

(I) THE VERB 'TO HAVE'

Neither NG nor SG possesses any verb 'to have', in this respect resembling both Turkish and Arabic, and the sense of possession is expressed by the verb 'to be' in the following manner:—

I have = there is to me, min, or  $ma\ hayya$ , or where the pronoun or noun is separated from the verb by another word,  $min \dots -a$

Thou hast = there is to thee,  $ta \ hayya$  or  $ta \ . \ . \ -a$  Example—hai bāzirgān, derdī min pūrra, gū cha derdī ta hayya?

'O merchant, I have great sorrow,' he said; 'what sorrow hast thou?'

Similarly, other parts of the verb 'to have' are furnished by corresponding parts of the verb 'to be', as, for example, haf sad süwāri min habūn I had seven hundred horsemen

When the pronoun is preceded by another word the suffixial pronouns are often used, and this is by far the most general use in the SG—

pārām hayya I have money pārāt hayya thou hast money pārāī hayya he has money pārām bū I had money

When no word precedes the pronoun, and it is still desired to use the suffixial form, one says—haima, I have haita, thou hast hayyatī, he has the word being formed of hay (= hayya) + pronoun + a. In the same manner a preterite is formed—būma, I had būta, thou hadst būī (SG), he had, etc.

The extreme southern (Lurish-Kurdish) uses the Persian verb dāshtan, which may also be heard among the Jaf (a tribe speaking corrupt Kurmānjī), with its southern terminations—

THE VERB

min dairim īma dairimin tū dairīt īwa dairitin awa dairit yāna dairiyān

The NG uses also the following form:-

marā hayya, I have mārā hayya, we have tarā hayya, thou hast vīrā hayya, he has marā bū, I had mārā bū, thou hadst, etc.

The SG, as a rule, does not use the full form hayya, except to emphasize the statement, and will be generally found to use the forms -ma, -ta, -a,  $-m\bar{a}na$ ,  $-t\bar{a}na$ ,  $-y\bar{a}na$ , as:  $p\bar{a}r\bar{a}ma$ , I have money;  $p\bar{a}r\bar{a}ta$ , thou hast money, etc.

From this use originate such common expressions as chīta? 'what is the matter with thee?' literally 'what hast thou?' and the possible answer, chīma? hīchm nīyya, 'what is the matter with me? nothing is the matter with me,' and in the preterite, as: aw rūozha ki rūyī na āwit bū na amit bū, 'that day that thou hadst not "this" nor "that" in thy face,' meaning 'that day thine expression was inscrutable.'

(2) THE VERB 'TO WISH' IN THE SOUTHERN GROUP While the NG possesses the verb khwāzin, 'to wish,' 'to want,' the SG has lost the use of any such verb, and now possesses nothing but fragments of the old verb wāin or wistn, 'to wish,' 'to love,' 'to desire,' which was conjugated thus—

Present Indicative: dawāim, dawāī, dawai, dawāin, dawāin, dawāin, dawīm, dawīt, dawī, dawīn, dawīn, dawīn, dawīn.

Preterite: mawist, tawist, awist, mānwist, tānwist, yānwist.

It will now be encountered rarely except in poetry.

To fill this deficiency the modern language has made use of two compound verbs, the meanings of which approximated to that of  $w\bar{a}in$ , and which are haz kirdin, to take pleasure in, and by development of the meaning, to want, and gerek  $b\bar{u}n$ , to be necessary, and by development of the meaning, to want, to desire.

The first verb is conjugated exactly as a compound verb which does not change any of its verbal forms, simply prefixing the word has to the various parts of the verb kirdin, which is set forth in detail in the section on irregular verbs. The use is as follows:—

Shaikh dalai haz dakam naghdekī lalāī tū baimawa the Shaikh says, 'I should like to come and see you for a little while'

The conjugation of the verb gerek  $b\bar{u}n$  follows as a compound of the verb 'to be' when used in the sense of 'to have', so that if we replace the word  $p\bar{a}r\bar{a}$  in the examples quoted under (1) by the word gerek, following the last rule given for its use in SG we obtain the meaning 'to wish', thus—gerekma, I want gerekita, thou wantest, etc. gerekm  $b\bar{u}$ , I wanted gerekit  $b\bar{u}$ , thou wantedst gerekm  $dab\bar{\imath}$ , I shall want, etc.

Examples of the use of these verbs is as follows:—

haz aikam shār birrūim I want to go to town harmī haz nakaīn? do you not want a pear?

nā, haz nākam laī no, I do not like them

haz aikam chwār pazm bisīainim, khu aw wakhtā

gerekm bū

I want to buy four goats, which I wanted at that time haz aikai wa paī birruī if you please, go on foot būo? mā būn chi gerekma? why? what do I want with fatigue?

THE ADVERB

(3) THE VERB 'TO SEE' IN THE SG

Like the verb 'to wish' this has lost most of its parts, and the preterite and perfect are the only two at all generally used, and those usually in the sense of 'to find'.

madī, I saw or found mdīwa, I have seen or found

The meaning of the verb 'to see' is achieved by a clumsy compound, chāo pai kawtin, which means 'the eyes falling upon'. This is used for past tenses, while for the present and sometimes the past also the compound pai diyār būn, 'to be apparent to one,' is used. Examples—aw jār chāom pai kawt, mar pai tu diyār niyya? I saw it that time, canst thou not see it?

hagar chāom pai kawtawa dam küzhdawa. if I had seen him I would have killed him.

Kābrā hāta māl, mināl ī khwaī paishī chāoakānī diyār nābū, le zhenakaī persī, chāoit pai minālakān nākawtī? kutī bāokim chļūn pait diyār nīn, diyāra chāoakānit nāsākha.

A fellow came home, but could not see his children. He asked his wife, 'Hast thou not seen the children?' She said, 'Little father, how is it thou seest them not? it is obvious that thine eyes are not whole.'

THE ADVERB

As in Persian, no particular form marks the adverb, which is such by its meaning only, and in many cases the adjective is employed in what we should call a purely adverbial position. For example, tungu hat wa rind qsai kir he came quickly and spoke well where tungu and rind are both adjectives used adverbially. This is extremely common.

Nouns and a preposition may be used together to form an adverb, and the usual prepositions used in such connexion are ba, 'with,' bai,  $b\bar{i}$ , 'without,' wa, 'with' (SG), as—ba danga pürr hāt, bī dangī chū he came very noisily, and went silently

The common adverbs are as follows:-

THE PREPOSITIONS

THE CONJUNCTIONS

The common conjunctions are—and o, wa, u ne,1 ānī, vā, nā or walī, hemā, ammā, lākīn but but if magar, mar chünka, buoya because, then also ish, zhi, ī not that nek, neku then, so pāsh if hagar, agar, ek if not wekna, wagarna because būo, labar neither . . . nor na...na...perhaps bashk whether cha . . . cha . . .

THE PREPOSITIONS

Though Kurdish possesses a full complement of prepositions, they are often, as in Persian, omitted, and it is necessary to know which may be so omitted to converse correctly. Their use should be observed from the examples of style cited in the second part of this book, which will enlighten the student as to the use of the prepositions more than would explanation here.

The common prepositions are-

I. la, at, from, to, with, for, on, by, according to the context. In SG it is extremely widely used, and a few examples are here given—

(a) sāghirī tū la bāda dāim purra thy goblet with wine is eternally full

- (b) labarī chi wāt kutī for what reason didst thou speak?
- (c) min lam bāno tu law khwārawa
  I at this height and thou at that depth (owing to its conjunction with the first vowel of the words am and aw, la joins itself to them, dropping the final -a)
- (d) ku wāllah, āw la pāshī īwa la rūh khwāshī baisāra that by God, he, after you (lit. at the afterwards of you), from (i.e. by the reason of) the happiness of his soul, shall be free
- (e) la rawāndiz hātim, la keui darrūim from Rawandiz I came, by Keui I go
- (f)  $g\bar{u}$ , la sarī wai khest (thus) said, he struck him on the head
- (g) bai chār la nāsākhi küzhrā bū unfortunate, he was killed by illnesses
- 2. zhe, from by, to. This is only used in NG and replaces la, having exactly the same use. La, however, is also employed in a number of the dialects of the NG as well as zhe. Examples—
- (a) behraek zhī zheboi khwa haldigirtin he used to take a portion of it for himself
- (b) Mirzui Rashū habū zhe tāifaīdi Yezīdī there was one Mirza Rashid, of the Yezidi tribes
- (c) pāshī zhe dūrawa min merūek warī kir afterwards from afar I sent a man
- 3. di, in. This proposition nearly always demands the addition of da to the noun, as it is then in the locative case. Examples—
  - (a) rū nīshtim di bāzhīrdā I sat in the bazar
  - (b) di mālīdā rrā ketīa asleep in his house

<sup>1</sup> Justi, Kurdische Grammatik, p. 164.

90

91

4.  $\bar{a}$ , to, for. Often demanding a final  $\bar{i}$  to the noun. Example—

hātimā shārī I came to town

- 5. ba, būi, with. The use is not very general. Example—ama hāt būi berāī this one came with his brother
- 6. lāgal, lāgar, digal, digar, with. Examples-
  - (a) aw shūlā digalī min kirī that work he did with me
  - (b) min lagalī hama hātim I came with Ahmad
  - (c) dābīnin nān digarī tü bring bread with the buttermilk

Note.—It must be noticed that though we use the word 'with' to translate lagal, etc., it is confined to the meaning 'accompanying', and the word lagal cannot be used for such meanings as 'by means of' which we express also by 'with' in English.

- 7. bi, wa, at, to, in, by; wa is only used in the southern dialects of the SG. Examples—
  - (a) bi rūozh chākī, bi shāo zerīftir by day thou art beautiful, by night more beautiful
  - (b) chūm bi shārdā I went to the town
  - (c) bimāl mām
    I stayed in the house
  - (d) amr bi shimikchī kir he commanded to the shoemaker

Where the preposition means 'in' it may frequently be omitted, and two of the above phrases may quite correctly be—

(b) chūm shārdā and māldā mām

Further examples of the omission of the preposition-

- (a) zhwi shundātir tarrim Vān after that I shall go (to) Van
- (b) gāinim hayya harrim chīān
  I have the idea to go (to) the hills

- 21. berāmber, barābar, berūi, opposite. Example mālā ma berāmberā khainā Āghā bū my tent was opposite to the house of the Agha
- 22. nãorās, lanãorās, between. Also means (as a noun) 'the middle', 'the centre'. Example—

nāorās am dū shākhān rraigaya between these two spurs the road runs

23. tir, tirik, dītir, khair, bil, jīāla, excepting, other than.

These propositions require the use of the  $iz\bar{a}fa$  or conjunctive  $-\bar{i}$ - when used with a noun or pronoun, as will have been noticed from the examples given, excepting  $b\bar{u}o$ , bo, zhebo, pai,  $b\bar{i}$ , bai, ba,  $b\bar{a}\bar{i}$ ,  $b\bar{u}i$ , wa,  $\bar{a}$ , di, zhe, and la, which are true prepositions. All the others are really nothing but nouns used prepositionally.

PART II

IDIOMATIC USES AND CONSTRUCTION

THE SUBJUNCTIVE MOOD

- I. There is in English a certain class of sentence which we construct by the use of the subjunctive mood following a present indicative or preterite, as in the phrases—
  - 'I know I should fall'
  - 'I knew I should fall'
  - 'I think I should say'
  - 'I think I know what he would say'

In all such instances the Kurmānjī uses for the second phrase the present indicative, thereby changing the narrative to a direct one, making the transposition of the above sentences—

- 'I know "I am falling"'
- 'I knew "I am falling"'
- 'I think "I say"'
- 'I think I know "what he says"'

which are in Kurmānjī the literal translationsdazānim dakewim ma zānī dakewim dafukrim debaizhim hush dakam dazānim chi dlai (SG)

2. In a somewhat similar manner in English we express the meaning of necessity by the use of an implied or
